STEVE WEINBERG graduated from the Missouri School of Journalism in 1970, returning later for a master's degree. He started in newspaper newsrooms, moved to magazines so he could write longer features, and then shifted to book writing with its immense word counts.

Today, Weinberg supplements his book writing with freelance magazine features, newspaper op-ed pieces and book reviews. His books include a guide to journalism in Washington, D.C. ("Trade Secrets of Washington Journalists," Acropolis, 1981); a biography of Armand Hammer (Little, Brown, 1989); a guide to reading and writing biography ("Telling the Untold Story," University of Missouri Press, 1992); "The Reporter's Handbook: An Investigator's Guide to Documents and Techniques," published by St. Martin's Press and commissioned by Investigative Reporters and Editors, 1996; A Journalism of Humanity, the centennial history of the Missouri School of Journalism (University of Missouri Press, 2008); and a dual biography of Ida Tarbell and John D. Rockefeller (W.W. Norton, 2008).
