Thomas Applewhite, M.D. is a graduate of St. Louis University School of Medicine. A Pediatric Radiologist since 1979, he has an appreciation for firearms as works of art and has developed an extensive knowledge of their capabilities and limitations. A firm believer in safety and education, he has attended The Chapman Academy of Practical Shooting in Columbia, Missouri, Thunder Ranch in Texas, SigArms Academy in New Hampshire, and the Medico-legal Death Investigator Course, sponsored by St. Louis University School of Medicine. A popular speaker at Mystery Writers Conferences and a consultant for mystery and crime novels, he identifies the common mistakes writers make when referencing firearms, assists in the creation of an authentic "shoot-out" scene, or selects the perfect weapon for a misfire. If a gun is on the page, his presentation, "Get the Right Gun for Your Murder" is a must.
