Chris Richman attended Elizabethtown College, where he received his undergraduate degree in professional. After graduation, he attended Rowan University where he received an MA in Writing. He is a former playwright, has contributed to The Onion, and was a sketch comedy writer. In 2008, he made the transition into a literary agent.

Chris enjoys working with debut writers and is primarily interested in middle grade and young adult fiction, with a special interest in books for boys, books with unforgettable characters, and fantasy that doesn't take itself too seriously. Genres he represents include, in Fiction: Action / Adventure, Offbeat / Quirky, Children's, Y/A, Commercial Fiction, Humor/Satire, Middle Grade; in Non-Fiction: Sports.

The fee is $25 for members of SLWG and its affiliated chapters, $35 for non-members. Chris has agreed to a limited number of pitch sessions that will last no longer than 5 minutes. You may request a pitch session, but there will be a limited available, and priority will be given to the genres that Mr. Richman represents.
